

INVISIBLE

CHARACTER DESCRIPTIONS

Jack Griffin: Jack has always been lazy, unmotivated, and a bit of a screw up, but deep down he's a good person. He buys a watch at a pawnshop that enables its wearer to become invisible and his life becomes a crazy misadventure as Jack learns that being invisible makes it harder to stay out of sight. Jack is in his mid 20's, average height, with an average build.

Geoff Mathew: Jack Griffin's best friend since the second grade and the only one who knows about Jack having the invisibility watch. Geoff is a huge science geek and loves the invisibility watch. He conducts various experiments to try and figure out how it works, but they mostly go awry. Geoff is in his mid 20's and is slightly overweight, a little short, and wears glasses.

Kathy Gaines: Kathy has been a good friend of Jack and Geoff since they were kids. Kathy is attractive, but not necessarily a super model. There is an attraction between her and Jack, but neither one has ever had the guts to tell the other how they feel.

Dr. Wells: A brilliant and eccentric scientist who developed the invisibility watch, while unknowingly funded by a terrorist organization looking to create invisible soldiers. When Dr. Wells realized what their plan for his technology was he took it and all his notes and ran. He hid the watch in a pawnshop to avoid it falling into their hands. He eventually tracks the watch to Jack.

The Cat in the Hat: Not much is known about this mysterious figure, not even his name. All that is known is that he is a very high-ranking member of the terrorist group, BASILISK, that hired Dr. Wells to research invisibility. He is determined to claim the invisibility watch for BASILISK's nefarious uses by any means necessary.